6 STEPS GREAT COACHES TAKE TO HELP ATHLETES REACH POTENTIAL

by Tim Elmore- Growing Leaders

This story will do your heart good.

Cristian Mojica is a high school student at Boston Latin Academy. He's also a football player and swimmer who is far more serious about sports than his academic development. That is, until this year. What did it take?

Sitting on the side of the pool with a stopwatch timing other swimmers.

His coach, along with his dad, decided Cristian needed to see the bigger picture. So when his grades came in, it was the perfect time to act. Mojica had a 1.66 grade point average last winter, and athletes at the school are required to have a 1.67 to participate. So he approached his head coach, Mark Thomas, and asked him what he could do to help him continue swimming. The kid was sure he needed their help.

The coach told Cristian no one could help him get back in the pool except him. He stuck to his guns, much to the athlete's shock. "I honestly don't think he took it that serious... he didn't think it was a big deal and he'd be able to slide by. Well guess what, he didn't," Thomas said. "He came to me and said, 'What can you do?' I said, 'Cristian, there's nothing I can do. If I could have done something, I would.' He needed to learn a lesson."

It seems everything in our culture screams that sports are the most important thing in life. These coaches simply used sports to teach a bigger lesson.

Coach Thomas and Cristian's dad agreed he would sit by the pool, hold the stopwatch, and time the other swimmers. Watching them would add to his incentive. "I think it absolutely killed him to miss the last three or four weeks and not go to the cities. Instead of swimming, he sat there and clocked them," Coach Thomas shared.

According to his next report card, it worked. Cristian now carries a solid 3.2 GPA. He is competing again in the city championships after being named the Boston Scholar-Athlete of the Month.

Yes, you read that right: Scholar-Athlete.

"At the beginning of my high school career, I never would've thought I'd be nominated for that because my grades weren't where they should've been," Mojica said during a recent swim meet. "It feels good to be nominated."

The fact is the coaches saw what the athlete could not. Now he knows he can do it.

How To Enable a Student Athlete to Rise to the Occasion

1. Tell them what you see.

Very often, student-athletes hide behind vanity but they don't see their inward potential or aptitude. If you see potential, let them know. Be clear about your vision and get other coaches or teachers to back you up. Therapists today frequently see a condition in kids they call "high arrogance, low self-esteem." We must help them see their aptitude far beyond their sport. Express your belief in them.

2. Use the word "yet."

When student-athletes say they just aren't good in math, science, or reading, they aren't lying. So far, they may have only seen mediocrity in the classroom. Stanford professor Dr. Carol Dweck, however, talks about current experiments she's doing with the word "yet." You can agree a student isn't good at something... yet. Always cultivate a "growth mindset" instead of a "fixed mindset." Development is possible.

3. Create incentive in them.

Like Coach Thomas above, stick to your standards for academics or character. Don't let them slide by their boss likely won't on the job in five years. Suspend them so they can grow, but find a way to have them "hold the stopwatch." Keep them close to the sport they love, to build a fire inside of them to return to it. Keep their vision alive to "get back in the pool" or on the field.

4. Help them "own" their growth.

Did you notice in the Cristian Mojica story the coaches communicated that the only person who could help the student get back in the pool was himself? They put the ownership on him. Our culture today so often fosters a "blame game" or a victim mindset that allows kids to blame someone else for their lack of performance. We owe it to them to equip them to take responsibility and own their journey.

5. Position your standards in the right place.

It's easy to hold standards too low or too high for some of our student-athletes. You must size-up what you believe to be their potential compare it to your standards for the team, and choose your standards wisely. Leaders must help teams reach heights they may not reach on their own, but not discourage them with a standard that's impossible to reach. Keep in mind students are capable of much more than they realize.

6. Consistently hold them accountable.

Once you've determined your standards, the only hope you have of players meeting them is to be consistent in your enforcement. People do what people see. Talk is cheap actions scream messages. Helping athletes achieve peak performance on and off the field is all about sticking to your guns and holding them accountable. It's how people grow — and how successful people reach their potential.

Growing Leaders founder Dr. Tim Elmore is passionate about understanding the emerging generation and helping adults teach them how to become leaders in their schools, their communities and their careers.

MHSCA MICHIGAN HIGH SCHOOL COACHES ASSOCIATION

April Newsletter from the NHSACA

Ah...., the smell of fresh baking buns in the oven is one of my favorite memories.

The way I grew up was much different. I had my mom home and every meal was prepared from scratch. We were guided and watched most of the time.

When our chores were done, we had the freedom to do what we wanted under her watchful eye.

Today it seems kids really do not have time to be kids.

I am torn by that. Junior High girls start their season in the middle of October and then join the high school teams in January while their coaches are always careful not to surpass the quarter limitations.

They finally finish their seasons just before the varsity moves into their playoffs. Shortly after the season is over many of those girls are practicing for AAU basketball, which they play most of the spring. Once summer comes, they are off to summer league events and camps before the fall seasons begin and it starts all over again.

Plus, if they participate in several sports these demands are multiplied. We have many scenarios like this across the country.

The demands of sports are grueling. For years we have been discussing the importance of multi-sport athletes and the benefits of participating in a wide range of activities knowing the repetitive actions of single sport athletes can cause damage to our young competitors.

We have also learned that there is a great deal of transfer from one sport to another and so we march on.

Some of the girls say that they like to be busy and this is what they want to do. Some of them say that it is what they need to do to stay competitive in their sport against other teams and for a position on their own team.

Some college coaches have presented at our clinics and occasionally the topic of recruiting has come up. One coach was asked why more rural kids were not recruited.

His answer was that kids do not play enough; they should play more. I also know of one parent who told the high school coach that the purpose of high school sports was to get them more playing time, so they were ready for club sports.

As a coach, part of me loves to see kids playing. I know that the more they are playing the more they are developing. I also know that all my players other coaches are thinking the same thing.

If I decide to back off on camps and open gyms the other coaches pick up that time, so the kids have not benefited and the sport I coach has lost ground and interest.

I may even be viewed as uninvolved and apathetic by community members.

So, what do we do? I Don't think there is one right answer. As professional educators and leaders, I think the best thing we can do is follow our NHSACA Code of Conduct and the 2016 Resolution the best that we can.

Here are some of those key points.

Exemplify the highest moral character, as a role model for young people

Respect the individual worth and reinforce the self-image of each athletic team member regardless of ethnicity or gender.

Strive to develop the qualities of leadership, initiative, good judgement and character development in each team member.

Communicate and interpret program goals and objectives to parents and the community, and youth programs.

Gain an awareness of the importance of prevention, care and treatment of athletic injuries.

Teach and abide by the rules of the game in letter and in spirit.

Encourage a healthy respect for the overall athletic program and its vital roles in education.

Encourage students to participate in the total athletic program – multisport participation.

Demonstrate Leadership by example and instruction, model integrity by behaving honestly in all situations, display good character and ethical behavior, and instill in student athletes the desire to follow their actions

As kids we all loved to play and that is part of why we were enticed to become coaches. We know that having fun is the most common answer kids give when they are asked why they play sports. Let's remember that and keep it fun!

The spring executive board meeting has been postponed so I have nothing to report there but please make sure to register for the convention this summer.

Also, please try to assist any of our Coach of the Year Finalists and Hall of Fame candidates in any way that you can. This spring has been very trying and the recent health scare not only in our nation but around the world has really altered people's lives.

I am saddened for all the people affected and have endangered loved ones.

An untold number are at a financial loss due to income, investments, or occupation.

I am heartfelt by the fact that kids and coaches who have worked so hard not only in this season but for many seasons do not have the chance to live out their dreams, which may have been once in a lifetime.

All we can do is remember that it really isn't the destination that has the value, it was the journey and that can never be taken away.

Take care, be safe and count your many blessings. Keep your faith!

Tim Wallstrum
Second Vice President

Michigan High School Coaches Assocation Past Presidents Note:

Ok,

I'll recover from the sadness all these dream ending cancellations have caused.

There were no tears, only a feeling, shared by every sport at every level, of "What could have been!"

Most painful for Seniors who will have no second chance, but also for any athlete who has no idea what a new year will bring.

"Who will I be a year from now?"

There is an emptiness and lack of fulfillment when the build up to hoped for success is suddenly gone, but remember, this isn't about winning or losing, it's about people living or dying.

So, take a deep breath and resign yourself to knowing "This is the right thing to do."

Michigan High School Coaches Association Distinguished Service Award is one of our highest awards for services and contributions to sports in the state of Michigan.

The MHSCA Distinguished Service Award:

MHSCA recognizes individuals and organizations who have provided extraordinary service to educational athletics, the advancement student athletes, coaches, or those who serve interscholastic athletics through its Distinguished Service Awards.

The Distinguished Service Award (DSA) is given to a person (or persons), either volunteer or staff, who have exhibited valuable professional service (within the MHSCA or among its association membership) including academically, supportive, service, or assistance distinction at any level of interscholastic athletics. These criteria are good measures of acceptable candidates and help to assure that recipients have a wide range of "service" that they provide to the profession of interscholastic athletics. Nominations should be submitted on an individual basis, not by a group or on behalf of constituent groups (conferences, affiliates, assemblies, committees, etc.).

The MHSCA Distinguished Service Award does not need to be awarded each year. This award should be bestowed only when the MHSCA Board of Directors committee decides that nominations warrant presentation of the award. This award may be given posthumously.
